

A black and white photograph capturing a moment of joy and resilience. Two figures are silhouetted against a bright, overcast sky, dancing on a wide, ornate stone staircase. The scene is drenched in rain, with vertical streaks of water falling all around them. The person on the left is in a dynamic, mid-air pose, while the person on the right is in a similar, expressive dance move. The ground in front of the stairs is wet and reflects the light, creating a shimmering effect. The overall mood is one of freedom and embracing life's challenges.

Leben heißt nicht zu warten bis der Sturm vorüberzieht sondern lernen
im Regen zu tanzen
